AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY STAGE DANCE SUCCESS

OLD TIME GATHERING IS WELL ATTENDED SPITE BAD
WEATHER

Did the old-timers enjoy themselves on Monday evening? Well, we'll say they did, and so did a large number of the younger folk, too. It was a truly happy gathering from start to finish.

The occasion was the Old Timer's Dance which was staged by the directors of the Agricultural Society, and the way that Bill Stuart and the rest of the fellows (and especially the ladies connected with the society) worked with might and main to "put it over," practically assured the success which was attained from the affair.

The pictures of the round-up in the Buffalo Park, were really worth while and the added local interest which was evinced by this feature being from "right at home" was appreciable. In addition, the talkie film which had been obtained specially for this grand evening, truly lived up to its reputation for hilarious fun and frolic. The "Cohens and Kellys in Africa" is such a feature as to make all feel free to join in the merriment at the start, and that spirit was carried right through till the wee wee hours when the last of the dancers wended a weary way homeward well satisfied that when the old fellows put on an "old time dance" they do it right.

And not the least of the praise is due in no small measure to the splendid music provided by the "Rhythm Kings" (both old and new) and the numbers were of such a splendidly varied nature that all and sundry felt the urge to "Hoe 'em down" on and off all evening through the affair.

The supper too, was, as usual with affairs by the society, the sumptuous feed which patrons are always assured of, and the coffee again par excellence.

Taken as a whole, there has hardly been a happier gathering of dancers all winter, or one where the patrons were better pleased, and no doubt the coffers of the society will benefit greatly by the efforts put forth in this regard.

ONCE BARREN LAKE FISHERMEN'S EDEN

WATERS IN CANADIAN ROCKIES SHOW FINE RESULTS IN THREE YEARS

EDMONTON—Four years ago the barren waters of the Medicine-Maligne lake system in Jasper National Park, in the Canadian Rockies, were taken in hand by the Federal Department of Fisheries. Trout fry were distributed carefully, and the results were so successful that a x-pound fish have been taken by anglers recently from a supply which seemed limitless.

Scientific investigators from the Biological Board of Canada report that on a calm evening they saw the surface of Maligne Lake so ruffled by the splashes of young speckled trout as to give "an appearance of rain," and they declared the stocking experiment there had "given results second to none in the history of fish culture." Using rod and line for test purposes in Maligne these investigators found sport "so good that three or four hours with one rod produced over 100 pounds of fish." In the adjoining Beaver Lake "as soon as the spoon struck, the water the trout rushed from all directions."

The official fishermen—Dr. F. Neave and Dr. A. Bajkov—set a 30-foot gill net in Beaver Lake. "Over 400 fish," they report, "were caught in about two hours, so that the most of the next two hours, had to be spent in cutting the meshes of the net and releasing the fish into the lake."

The first trout fry were put into the water in 1928 and have grown into fine, handsome specimens worthy of any angler's attention.

The senior ladies basketball championship was decided for 1932 in Edmonton last week when the Commercial Grads scored the Gradenettes by a total score of 148-67 in the two games played.

SPECIAL TELEGRAPH SERVICE AT EASTER

Through an arrangement with transatlantic cable companies, the Canadian National Telegraphs will transmit at low flat rates, Easter greetings to eleven European countries the messages to be delivered in any one of ten languages. This special transatlantic service is available between March 19 and March 23 inclusive. Delivery of flowers at Easter by telegraph to overseas points as well as to any section of North America is also made possible this year through the co-operation of telegraph and cable companies and florists in all European countries.

The Industrial Department on the Western Region of the Canadian National Railways was abolished March 16. The work of that department has been taken over by the General Manager, A. A. Tisdale.

DOINGS IN THE LEGISLATURE

EDMONTON, March 28.—This has been the busiest week of the legislature. A tremendous amount of work has been done. At the time of writing most of the estimates have been disposed of and a number of important resolutions were dealt with. The house has had night sessions all week. On account of there being no sitting on Good Friday, the members even sat Wednesday night and again on Saturday morning.

Estimates occupied most of the time and these provided a field work for the liberal benches. They fully lived up to their expressed determination at the beginning of the session to scrutinize every expenditure of the government. Right and left they hurled criticism at the government, and many times the debate grew bitter and acrimonious.

Incidentally, the liberal leader, George H. Webster, has earned for himself a new sobriquet. Among galleries he is being referred to as the "wily old serpent." And this, as one onlooker observed, because just as the government is striding along briskly through the dry grass of the estimates, up pokes the head of the "wily old serpent" and they get atting.

Mr. Webster delivered a slashing attack on the government in connection with its policy on the Lethbridge Northern project. He declared that it was high time the administration put the project on a paying basis. He received support from W. H. Shield U.F.A., who declared that the sooner the province got out from under, the better.

Mr. Webster charged that the government had failed to act thoroughly on a report they received in 1925. Then, he said, the debt should have been written down to such a point that settlers would have been able to make the undertaking a self-sustaining one. He claimed they were fooling themselves if they thought they were going to get anything out of the $9,000,000 outstanding. As a matter of fact, said he, the province stood to lose some $6,000,000.

Hon. V. W. Smith while admitting that the province stood to make a heavy loss over the Lethbridge Northern, said that $235,000 was estimated in revenue from the project. He agreed, however, this was dependent largely upon crop results this year.

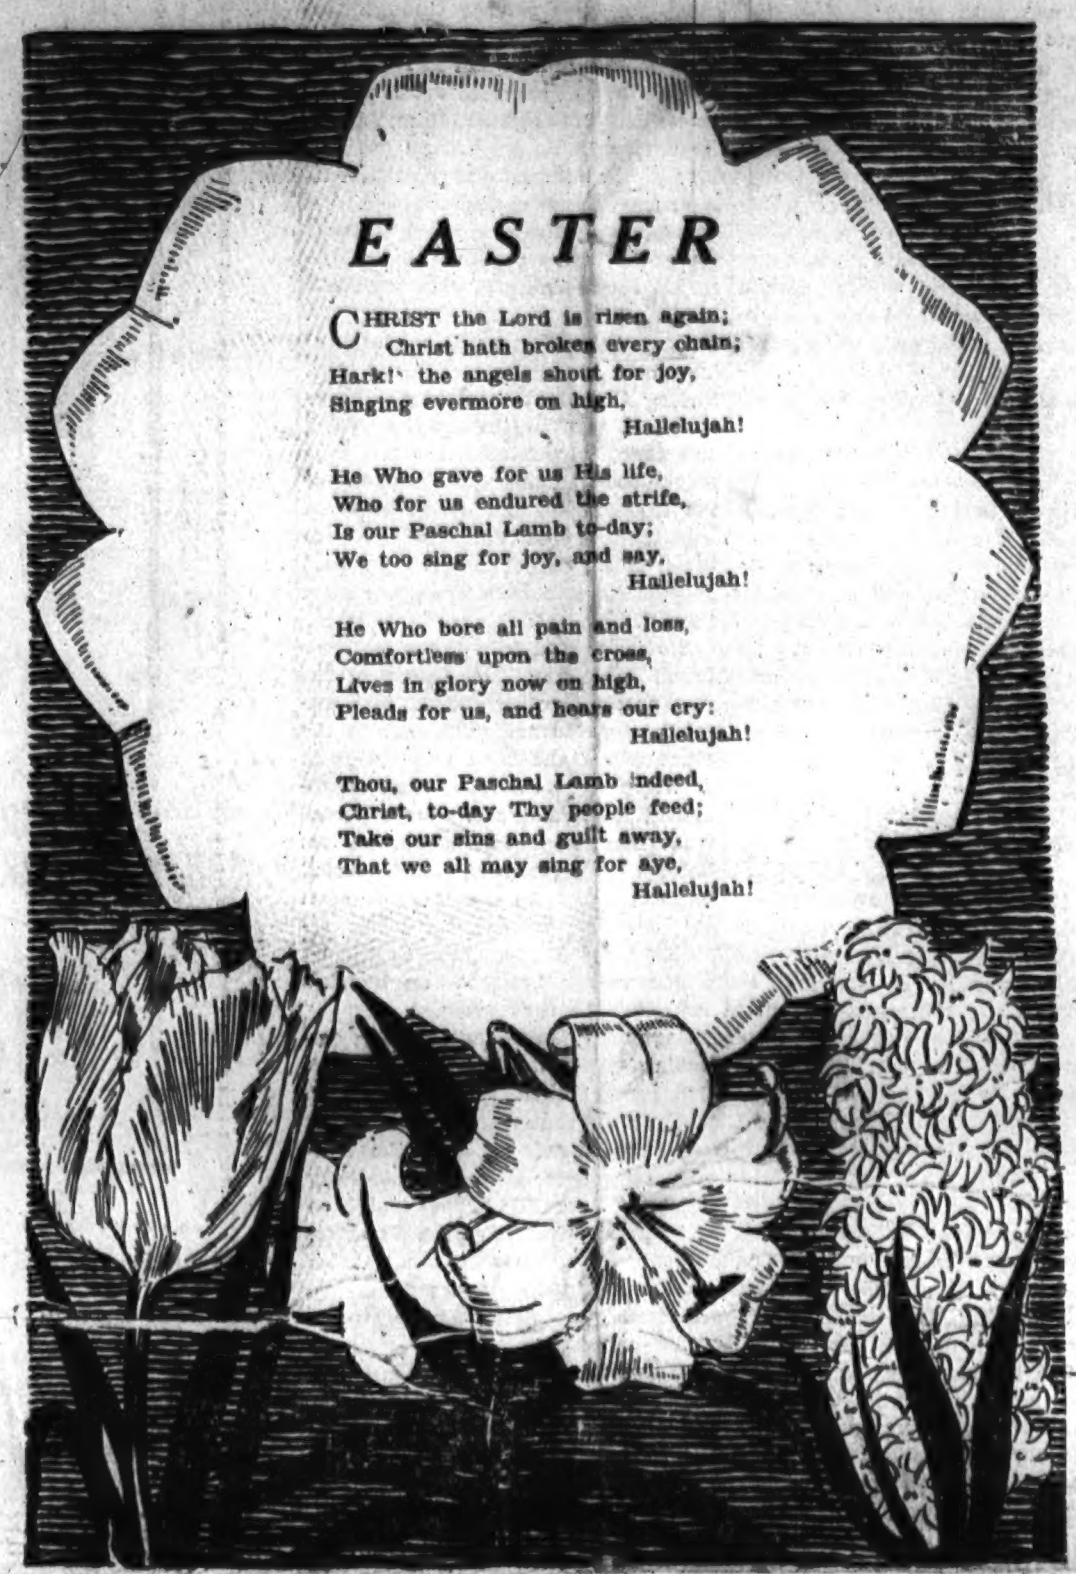

W. R. Howson, liberal, Edmonton and L. A. Giroux, Grouard, led a strong attack on the publicity department of the government. Mr. Giroux charged that the government was using the publicity commissioner for political purposes. He quoted a letter that had been sent out to the weekly newspapers, which he declared was nothing but an interview with the minister of agriculture.

Premier Brownlee declared the letter was sent out merely to correct a statement.

"No official of the government out interviews with cabinet ministers," thundered Mr. Howson. If ministers wanted a press agent they should pay for his services themselves.

Mr. Giroux charged that correspondence showed that the new commissioner so far from reducing advertising expenditures had launched on a plan to increase it among the weekly newspapers with a view to the government carrying favor among them.

CUTWORM MENACE WARNING ISSUED

METHOD OF TESTING WHEAT FIELDS EXPLAINED IN OTTAWA NOTICE

(T)TAWA—With a view to enabling farmers in Saskatchewan and Alberta to avoid or reduce potential losses from cutworm damage this year, Arthur Gibson, Dominion entomologist, has issued a special notice in which particular attention is called to the fact that in those areas in which severe losses on account of damage by the pale western cutworm were caused in 1931 even greater losses may be expected in 1932, providing weather conditions are average, and that even a very wet spring will only partially check the immediate ravages.

Any fields which were undisturbed so that the soil surface was caked or crusted from August 1 to September 15 in 1931 should be reasonably free from cutworms this year, and reseeded fields which were cut after September 16 in 1931 should be considered as safe if undisturbed during August.

In any case where there is no doubt as to a field being free of cutworms a test should be made by seeding an indicator strip of wheat diagonally across the field. This indicator strip should be selected as early as it is possible to get a drill on the land and long before regular seeding starts. One strip wide is sufficient, and such a diagonal strip will give a fair example of the condition of the field, as weather conditions which will bring this grain to a height of about five inches will also hatch many of the eggs.

If, on examination, from ten to fifteen plants per square yard show injury the field should not be seeded. Under normal conditions this strip will show whether or not cutworms are present; by the end of the first week of May or earlier, and seeding operations should be governed accordingly.

The "scarlet and gold" will again be in evidence at the week end when our local A.P.P. officer, Corp. Collett, will automatically transfer back to the R.C.M.P. The staff at Wainwright is also to be increased by the addition of Cons. Gair, who will arrive from Lloydminster on Thursday.

SPECIAL EASTER MEETING WOMEN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY

A very interesting service was held in the United church on Easter Monday, when the Women's Missionary societies of the three protestant churches conducted a joint meeting, and the three ministers each gave brief addresses. Rev. Mr. Brooker spoke on "The Good Friday aspect of Easter season," Rev. Mr. Trendell brought an Easter message from the words at the tomb, "Go tell," and Rev. Huston spoke on the significance of the Easter thank offering. Mrs. W. Brunner read the scriptures and Mrs. Bradley led in prayer; the whole forming an impressive Easter service conducted by Mrs. Coursier. During the meeting Mr. Alec. Adams and Mr. C. Lilly rendered musical numbers, and the whole was much enjoyed by those present.

WEDDING BELLS

COREY—SWANSON

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Swanson, in town on Saturday last, when Miss Mitchell, their eldest daughter was united in marriage to Mr. Todd S. Corey, of Bladworth, Sask., by the Rev. W. S. Brooker. Miss Margaret Swanson, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, while Mr. Alex. Swanson, one of the bride's brothers, was best man. After the ceremony a tasty wedding dinner was served. The newly-weds will make their home at Bladworth, Sask., on the groom's farm there.

DISTINGUISHED VISITOR COMING

Dr. Margaret McKellar, L.L.D. was decorated by the King in 1911 with the Kaiser-i-Hind medal for distinguished services in humanity's cause. She has spent 40 years in India as a medical missionary—first under the Presbyterian church and later under the United Church. Dr. McKellar is travelling across Canada charming her audiences with her lectures and Wainwright's fortunate to have this opportunity to hear her. This talented speaker will address the meeting in the United church on April 7th under the auspices of the W.M.S. when all (men and women alike) are welcome.

CANADIANS CONTROL DOMINION BUSINESS

IN CANADA 65 PER CENT OF CAPITAL OWNED, 13 PER CENT IN BRITAIN

OTTAWA—Those who fear the ultimate domination of Canada by foreign capital and its influences find small ground for their belief in new figures compiled by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics on the basis of last year's census of industry. Total business capital employed in Canada is $3,900,000,000, exclusive of private capital in domestic enterprises such as farms and homes, and of the total about 65 per cent is owned in this Dominion. Of the remainder 13 per cent is owned in Great Britain, 21 per cent in the United States and one per cent in other countries. Canada's national wealth is estimated about $6,200,000,000, and the British and foreign gross investments represent about 20 per cent of this gross total.

The business capital of $3,900,000,000 is secured by taking the total of bonded indebtedness of Dominion provincial and municipal governments, investments in railways, manufacturing concerns, mines and metal industries, public utilities, trading establishments, etc. Of British investments, 67 per cent are in Government securities and public utilities, chiefly railroads. United States investments are 50 per cent in industry and mining securities and an equal proportion in Governments and utilities.

British and foreign investments in branch plants in Canada are more than $300,000,000. Canadian investments abroad are estimated at $375,000,000.

The return trip will get underway July 31st and will arrive in Jasper the 20th.

CAN. NATIONAL RLWYS. WEEKLY NEWS ITEMS

DEVOTION

A story of more than average human interest comes from a point on the Shellbrook-Big River branch of the Canadian National Railways. As a train crew was recently leading a frozen horse into a boxcar, attention was attracted to a collie dog moaning and crying at the car door. Long after the train had gone the dog continued to mourn at the station and upon inquiry it was learned that the horse was that of the dog's equine friend, who had died lately. Refusing to be comforted by his master, the collie had followed his pal's remains as far as possible.

MAPLE SYRUP TIME IN EASTERN CANADA

Reports received at headquarters of the Canadian National Railways from its agents throughout Quebec, Ontario and the Maritime Provinces say that the sap is running and thousands of farmers are busy in their maple groves tapping trees. It is estimated that more than 8,000,000 maple trees in Eastern Canada are tapped each Spring, and in the Province of Quebec alone close to 50,000 farmers have sugar groves.

NO MAN'S LAND IS HOME OF EVERYONE

Financially speaking Canada's National liners cruising the Caribbean this winter will be international territory. The Canadian National's plan to overcome exchange confusion in ship's barber shops, refreshment rooms and kiosks is this:

United States, Canadian, English, West Indian and other monies commonly circulated in this territory will be accepted and change given in the currency tendered, just as though the transaction took place in the country whose money is concerned.

WESTERN LUMBER ON WAY TO MONTREAL

Bound for Montreal, the C.N.S. Canadian Winner left British Columbia filled to capacity with a cargo comprised chiefly of lumber.

This Canadian National freighter opens the 1932 Vancouver-Montreal service and will be followed by the Canadian Spinner, sailing from Vancouver about April 10 and the Canadian Ranger, sailing about May 10. If cargoes continue to be heavy the company will increase the service from monthly to fortnightly sailings.

The Canadian Winner is due at Halifax about April 15 and at Montreal but April 20. She will sail from Montreal for Vancouver on May 15 or thereabouts.

SWEET PROSPECTS IN BARBADOS

The English Bank, "Barclays" says that Barbados, which is known as "Little England," and which is said to be "more English than England herself," will have a larger crop of sugar in 1932 than the normal Barbados crop of 80,000 tons.

In 1931 a drought almost halted the Barbados harvest of sugar. It would seem that Dame Fortune is smiling sweetly on "Little England" through the dissipating clouds of depression. The tropical colony lies along the "eastern group" route of Canadian National steamers that unite Canada with the West Indies.

Mr. W. Tansley, though still in hospital is now getting along very nicely there, and Mr. E. Schroh has returned to his home at Edgerton.

REMAINS OF J. WILSON ARE LAID TO REST

BIG CROWD PAYS TRIBUTE AT SERVICE IN ST. THOMAS'

The funeral of the late Mr. James Wilson, head herdsman at the cattalo enclosure in the Buffalo National Park, who passed away as reported last week, was held at St. Thomas' (Ang.) church on Thursday last, when the vicar, Rev. A. M. Trendell officiated before a packed congregation.

A number of favorite hymns of the deceased were sung by all present and the minister spoke with deep feeling on the glories of the resurrection and the gathering again with loved ones in the hereafter.

Left to mourn their loss are the widow and three sons and one step-daughter and in addition two brothers John and Robert of Boissevain, Man., and three sisters, Mrs. E. Mosgrove and Mrs. S. Greave, of the same district, and Mrs. E. Moss of Yokohama Japan.

His nephew, Mr. W. Wilson, of Whitewater, Man., who came here about three weeks ago, upon hearing of his uncle's illness was present at the funeral, as was also Mrs. Jas. Vogel, of Saskatoon, sister of Mrs. Wilson.

The interment was made at Wainwright cemetery, the pallbearers being all fellow-workers of the deceased and on the park staff, viz., Messrs H. B. Walker, E. Frickleton, E. Cotton, R. Sharp, H. Ordway and E. Cameron.

Among the floral tributes of love and respect were a pillow from Mrs. Wilson and Family, wreaths from Buffalo Park staff, and Mr. Reeves, sprays from Mr. and Mrs. Vogel, Mr. and Mrs. E. Tory, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson, "Niece & Nephew," and others.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. Jas. Wilson and Family wish to express their heartfelt thanks to all who have shown such love and sympathy during the illness and passing away of the late Mr. James Wilson, and especially to the doctors and nurses and the staff at the Buffalo Park.

LOCAL NOTES

Mr. Hedley Stewart, of Lavoey, was over to Wainwright to spend the Easter holiday with friends here.

A good crowd was in attendance at the sale of the Jerry Golding farm effects last week, when Steve Bowerman wielded the hammer to good effect. Prices ruled good too, and everyone was satisfied.

Mr. H. Beveridge of the Royal Bank spent the week end visiting friends and relatives in Calgary.

Mrs. Morrison and her daughter are here from Edmonton on a visit to Mrs. Morrison's mother, Mrs. G. Arkwright.

Mrs. James Vogel, of Saskatoon, sister of Mrs. Jas. Wilson, was here last week to attend the funeral of the late Mr. Wilson.

TRADE BETWEEN CANADA & NEW ZEALAND

Now that the effect of last year's Canada-Australia trade agreement has had time to expand and with a similar advantage in trade expected between Canada and New Zealand, the Canadian National Steamships look forward to an increase in freight traffic over the Montreal-Antipodes route this summer.

There is a possibility that two services will be maintained, one from Montreal via the Panama Canal to Australia and one via the Canal to New Zealand. At present the routes are combined.

The Canadian National recently announced that possibly it would increase the Montreal-Panama-Vancouver sailings from monthly to fortnightly. Also, passenger sailings from Montreal for West Indies ports will be increased by "vagabond cruises" to the British, Dutch and French West Indies using the freighters, Canadian Pathfinder, Canadian Skirmisher and Canadian Transporter, each voyage lasting about a month.

Try Miss McFarlane's Favorite Recipe for BISCUITS

1/2 teaspoon salt 4 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder (or 1 1/2 cups bread flour)
3 cups pastry flour 2 tablespoons shortening
1/2 cup milk, or half milk and half water

Mix together flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in the chilled shortening. Now add the chilled liquid to make soft dough. Turn dough onto a floured board and do not handle more than is necessary. Roll or pat out with hands to about 1/4 inch thickness. Cut out with a floured biscuit cutter. Place on slightly greased pan or baking sheet and bake in hot oven at 450° F. 12 to 15 minutes.

"For Light, Flaky

Biscuits

use Magic Baking Powder,"

says Miss M. McFarlane, dietitian of
St. Michael's Hospital,
Toronto

"I RECOMMEND Magic because I know it is pure, and free from harmful ingredients."

Miss McFarlane's opinion is based on a thorough knowledge of food chemistry, and on close study of food effects upon the body. On practical cooking experience, too.

Most dietitians in public institutions, like Miss McFarlane, use Magic exclusively. Because it is always uniform, dependable, and gives consistently better baking results.

And Magic is the favorite of Canadian housewives. It outsells all other baking powders combined.

You'll find Magic makes all your baked foods unusually light and tender... and gives you the same perfect results every time.

THE ROMANCE OF VINCENZA

Vincenzo Calvacco had all the warmth of Southern Italy in his blood, and pretty Louise Arnold reflected the cold ruggedness of her northern Poland. Louise was phlegmatic, cool and calculating, always the mistress of her emotions. Vincenzo was impetuous to the verge of recklessness in matters where his emotions were concerned.

So it was, that when the two met, it was like the warm summer sun, shining on a snow bank, the cold within resisting the warmth without for a spell only to yield eventually to the radiating influence of a nature that breaks down icy barriers. There was this difference however—where the snow bank melts and disappears entirely from the warmth that is directed at it from without, the woman still retained the cool faculty that calculates the cost and demands that it be paid. It was a difference that was to mean much to Vincenzo Calvacco.

They first met one evening in the spring of 1919 when Vincenzo, who was employed as night watchman at the Children's Court in East 22nd Street, New York City, saw the pretty Polish girl sweeping out a room at City College which was located just in the rear of the City Court building. Vincenzo had seen other women working around City College without attracting more than passing attention from him, but watching this Polish girl across the alleyway, he felt something surging within him. There was that in the gracefulness of her plump well-rounded body, as she wielded the broom, the poise of her head as she shook back the blond curls from her flushed face, that appealed to him. Besides, it was Spring.

Vincenzo manufactured an excuse to call to her and ask her a question and for some minutes they leaned out of the windows and conversed across the narrow alleyway. Thereafter he made it a point to see her and converse with her every evening when she arrived to attend her duties at City College—and the chance acquaintance developed into a close friendship.

There came the time when the warm desire for the girl that surged within Vincenzo asserted himself. It seemed as though she were a match that set fire to all the passion that was his heritage from a passionate race. Before she knew it, his arms were around her, his hot kisses were smothering the words of protest that came to her lips. Failing to break his tight hold on her, she clenched both hands in his dark curly hair and pulled. She beat at his face that was pressed close to hers with her tiny fists. With all the force at her command, she resisted him and struggled against him until she was exhausted—then, when he finally released her, she fell back against a desk, breathless, weak, trembling.

"You beast!" she stormed, when she had finally regained her breath. "So that's the kind of a girl you think I am!"

"Oh, Louise," Vincenzo pleaded, "I couldn't help it. I had held myself in control as long as I could. But I love you, Louise. I love you more than anything else in this world and I want you."

"You want me!" the girl sneered. You want me for what you think you can get—that's what you want. Well you can't." As she reached her hands on the top of the desk to support herself, they came in contact with a hammer she had been using, and she grasped it. "If you dare lay your hands on me again, I'll brain you with this hammer."

Vincenzo hung his head. "I'm sorry I acted the way I did Louise," he said, "but I love you girl, and we could be so happy if you'd only try to love me. I didn't mean what you think I did, honest I didn't, Louise. If I have offended you, it was only because I love you so much I couldn't help myself."

Then without a word, the girl walked out of the room and down the hallway. The man made no attempt to follow her, offered no word of protest at her leaving. For several evenings after that when she saw Vincenzo across the way, she looked in the other direction and didn't speak to him. And Vincenzo looking only and ashamed of himself, made no attempt to surge himself upon her.

But it was Spring, the mating time of birds, and love and romance was in the air. Even the cold nature of the Polish girl felt the influence, and unobserved, she would watch for Vincenzo across the alleyway. His apparent contrition for his impetuous act touched her. One evening, when the soft gloaming of an early May-day was settling over the alley, she called to him.

"I'm sorry Vincenzo," she told him

"For the way I've been acting. Will you forgive me?"

"It's me that should ask forgiveness," he replied. "If—if we could only be friends again, Louise, I—I'll try to control myself."

"But Vincenzo"—and her phlegmatic Polish nature melted as she actually blushed in the gathering darkness—"I—I want to be more than friends with you."

In some way Vincenzo reached her. In some way they found themselves in each others arms his hot kisses again smothering the words that came to her lips—but this time they were not words of protest but words of endearing love, and her lips responded to his with a passionate warmth that would have melted the snows of her native Poland. For a long interval her warm body thrived against his, and for that interval unbridled love transformed the commonplace of a city alley into a garden of dreams.

After that, they seldom missed an evening together, except on week-ends when Vincenzo had to go out of the city. He explained these absences to Louise by saying that, because his presence wasn't required at the Children's Court on week-ends he had obtained employment for week-ends over in New Jersey, where he went every Friday and stayed until Monday. And Louise accepted the explanations without question.

Often Louise would come over in to the Children's court building and visit with Vincenzo until late at night, and sometimes Vincenzo would take her to the rooms where she lived. On one of these occasions Vincenzo suggested to Louise that he move his trunk there and stay so they could be together more often.

"It will be just as though we were married," he said. "And we are married in the sight of all that is holy dear, for you are mine and I am yours—and that's all that matters."

"But it isn't all that matters Vincenzo," she replied. "I want to be truly and honestly married in the eyes of the law. When will that time come, Vincenzo?"

"It won't be long now, dear," he replied. "I'm getting along with these two jobs and I'll soon have things fixed so we can be married and be together always. That's why I have to go away and leave you on week-ends. In the meantime, don't let us permit the shadow of impatience to mar our complete happiness in each other."

So, overcoming her protests with endearing words, Vincenzo moved his trunk around to where the girl lived and lived with Louise Arnold. He continued his week-end absences—absences in which Louise waited longingly for his return, and for a long period the girl was extremely happy. The warmth of Vincenzo's passion had melted all the icy barriers, and the girl was living in clouds of roseate hue, lost in complete abandon to her new-found love.

Then the clouds began to darken for Louise Arnold. Vincenzo became less affectionate, sometimes actually seeming to resent the fast-growing affection of Louise for him. To her constant entreaties for an early marriage, Vincenzo at first replied with promises, later with a sullen indifference then with open resentment that frequently vented itself in fits of violent rage.

For a period of four years, this continued, and Vincenzo still opposed all her pleadings for a legal marriage. He began to absent himself from the house, for long periods through the middle of the week, in addition to the week-ends that he spent in New Jersey, so that in order to see him and renew her pleadings with him, Louise frequently would go around to the City Court building and visit him in the rooms there at night.

Then came the day when tragedy moved in where romance had resided. On the morning of July 5th, 1923 Joseph Stewart, day porter at the Children's Court, arrived at the building about six o'clock as usual. Not finding the night watchman downstairs, he went up to the third floor and there encountered a sight that galvanized him into quick action. On the tile floor of the detention room was the body of Vincenzo Calvacco lying in a pool of dried blood that showed he had been dead for some time.

Stewart raced into the street and found Patrolman John Legge, of the 21st precinct police station, who immediately returned with him to the place where the body lay. Going to a telephone, the policeman summoned an ambulance, then reported what had happened to his station. Later when detectives, accompanied by Doctor Charles Norris, chief medical examiner arrived, the latter reported the death had been caused by a hemorrhage brought on by stab wounds in the left groin.

Beginning their investigation immediately, detectives from the homicide squad found spots of crimson on the floor that led from where the body was found, out into the hallway, then north along the hallway and into Room 310, which had been converted into a shambles. The furniture had been knocked about chairs were overturned, papers from an overturned wastebasket were strewn over the floor, and there were spots of dried blood on a black leather couch that stood to the right of the door at the entrance, and smeas of blood on the wall over the couch, where blood had even been splashed on a calendar that hung on the wall.

The wall over the couch showed a nick in the plaster as though it had been struck by some sharp instrument, and behind the couch detectives found a long-bladed bread knife with a bent tip in which some of the plaster still clung, and the blade stained with blood. Evidently, this was the instrument that had snuffed out the life of Vincenzo Calvacco—but in whose hands?

Nobody appeared to know much about Calvacco, though he had been employed as night watchman at the Children's Court for five years. When the court employees began to arrive for their daily duties, it was shown on the employment book that he lived at Lodi New Jersey; so far as could be learned at first, nobody

GUM CUSHIONS

An Extra Value
Cushions of pure gum rubber moulded in between the plies of cord fabric, making a "bearing" that reduces friction and wear at these points as effectively as ball bearings do in machinery.

WIDER TREAD

An Extra Value
The Roadcraft Tire has extra width of tread which gives extra traction and extra protection from skidding. The tread is carefully designed to give the maximum grip of the road surface.

KEEPING THE FACE CLEAN ?

Of course you wash it --- but is it clean? We're willing to wager it is. Then you don't simply go through the motions of washing your face as a habit, but because it makes you feel "right" to know that it is clean and because it is pleasing to the people you meet in the course of the day. Well then, when you buy stationery for your business, is it not worth your while to see it is properly printed and not accept printed matter of any old kind just simply because it is cheap?

You would'nt use jute as a face towel would you ? But it's much cheaper than linen. Business stationery is your "paper face" --- your personal representative --- why not make sure it represents you properly. We will be glad to show you paper and ink samples, specimens of type faces, layouts and estimates. Phone 45. Ask our representative to call. Mail orders promptly filled.

THE RESURRECTION AND THE LIFE

It is the Easter message that helps us to see more clearly the Divine import of the resurrection and the life beyond. From this we build up a beautiful conception of the future life.

The great question of antiquity was, "If a man die, shall he live again?"

While some systems of religion held out some faint hope of a shadowy existence beyond the grave, it was Christianity which gave humanity an adequate ideal and sufficient reason for this hope. He whose resurrection we commemorate next Sunday brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel.

We need not be alarmed by the apparent uncertainty and professed indifference of some to this hope. Such indifference and uncertainty is largely due to our absorption in the physical sciences and in the material welfare of humanity. This is but a passing fashion. Thinking men realize that a general loss in faith in immortality would cut the nerve of altruistic effort and weaken our moral sanctions.

COMING BACK TO EARTH

E. J. Kulas, President of the Midland Steel Products Company, says:
That the period of depression through which the country has been passing may prove to have been of benefit to the country if it restores the old-fashioned appreciation of the value of a dollar. For a number of years prior to 1929 the country was going through a period of expansion.
Prices were rising, wages were rising, business was getting bigger day by day. The whole tendency was to make the young man just coming up in the world feel that it was not necessary to keep track of his dollars because it was easy to get more. In the late twenties this fever of expansion developed into a real speculative mania, in which not only a lot of young business men but many others who were old enough to know better became obsessed with the idea that hard work was not necessary when fortunes could be made in the markets over night.

The depression has been bringing us all back to earth. Many prices are back to the levels obtained at the beginning of the present century and it is likely that our appreciation of the importance of financial independence will also get to those levels. Thirty years ago the careful young man watched his expenditures saved a little out of every pay and when business opportunity presented itself he had money in the bank to take advantage of it. Those were the young men who became our present business leaders. Their sons were unfortunate in coming on the business stage at a period when many of the old-fashioned ideas of financial prudence seemed to be on the shelf.

A serious siege of illness sometimes is very good for a man, because it eliminates the poisons from the system and gives the body a chance to function as nature planned. We are quite likely to find that our business body is much more healthy because the illness of drastic depression has burned a lot of the false ideas about easy money out of our systems and left us where we understand that we must work for what we get.

A real pressing invitation to attend the International Press exhibihas reached us this week—but without the necessary (very) tickets, passports, etc., so we'll stay home.

This is the second of such exhibi-to comprise newspapers from some 249 countries and printed in 181 over three hundred citizens from Blaine Lake and towns along the Lake and the party was welcomed in Prince Albert by Mayor H. M. Sibbald and members of the city coun-entertained at a luncheon while others of the party found interest in

Electric Cooking and Its Advantages*Economical-Clean-Fast-Convenient-Healthy*AN ELECTRIC RANGE IS ECONOMICAL BECAUSE

Food, of course, costs more than fuel. It is a well-known fact that shrinkage on foods in preparation runs from ten to twenty per cent. This percentage, however, is greatly reduced when the food is cooked on an ELECTRIC RANGE, which means that your food budget is lessened for the simple reason that you buy less food.
Furthermore, an ELECTRIC RANGE, properly operated, works for you at the surprisingly low cost of about one cent per meal per person.

AN ELECTRIC RANGE IS CLEAN BECAUSE

There is no soot or smoke to smear your kitchen, pots and pans and other cooking utensils. No tedious scouring. Your draperies retain their original beauty longer, when you cook with ELECTRICITY, clean as sunlight. The ELECTRIC RANGE is easy to clean and equally as easy to keep clean.

AN ELECTRIC RANGE IS FAST BECAUSE

High speed surface elements give quick cooking heat, and well insulated oven soon reaches baking temperature. Practically all the heat is conserved for cooking, very little being wasted. The ELECTRIC RANGE itself does not radiate heat.

AN ELECTRIC RANGE IS CONVENIENT BECAUSE

The antiquated pastime of "pot-watching" is totally eliminated forever. This tiresome task is efficiently and accurately handled by the Automatic Timer and Oven Heat Control without your supervision. You slip the food in the oven, set the controls, and forget it, knowing that the meal will be perfectly cooked on time, every time, at dinner time. Modern recipes call for the application of specific temperatures for certain time intervals. The ELECTRIC RANGE does this for you to the degree and minute, which means that you experience a new freedom in cooking with positive assurance of better results. The ELECTRIC RANGE can be conveniently placed in your kitchen to save unnecessary steps, and will keep your kitchen cool because of its insulated oven, centering the heat inside, where it belongs.

AN ELECTRIC RANGE IS HEALTHY BECAUSE

The full flavor of foods cooked ELECTRICALLY is retained in the food, which also applies to the vitamins, mineral salts and juices, so essential to a properly balanced meal, as the cooking is done with very little water, thereby conserving these health-giving elements, which are lost when ordinary methods are used.

Our prices on Electric Ranges, including installation in your home, are the lowest ever offered in Alberta. We invite you to consult our Local Manager for these prices and full details of our Convenient Time Payment Plan.

CONTINUATION OF DOINGS IN LEGISLATURE

D. M. Duggan, conservative leader thought that in times of stress like the present the government should have been able to carry on without the necessity of creating this new office at a cost of $16,000 to the province. The vote was passed.

A move to have the number of inspectors employed in the bureau of labor reduced was made by H. J. Montgomery, liberal, Wetaskiwin, but it was defeated. Some of these inspectors, he declared, made one or two trips to various parts of the province in a year. He thought one trip would be enough and that considerable money might thus be saved.

Fred White, labor, Calgary, said these inspectors were engaged in protecting human life. They should not be cut down, Premier Brownlee agreed with Mr. White. Premier Brownlee and John Irwin, conservative, Calgary also favored their retention.

A political battle royal was waged between L. A. Giroux, liberal and Hon. George Hoadley, minister of health. Mr. Giroux sought to bring to the attention of the house an individual case in the Ponoka mental hospital. He was met by a decision that the committee of the whole had decided it should not deal with individual cases.

Notwithstanding this, Mr. Giroux got in a long statement and threatened he would find some other means to expose the situation.

Dr. H. W. McGill, Calgary, asked if he had brought the matter to the attention of the minister.

"No, I have not personally," replied Mr. Giroux. "What would be the use? They would do their best to cover up."

This brought Mr. Hoadley to his feet with a jerk. "I object to that statement," he said.

Mr. Giroux sat down without replying.

"Mr. Giroux," shouted the minister "I am telling you I object to that statement—they would do their best to cover up. You have never brought my attention to this matter. There are some very splendid men engaged in the work of these institutions and I, as minister, will not allow you to make a statement detrimental to them on the floor of this house, where they have no opportunity to reply. If we were not in this house I would tell you the word I would use to describe any such action."

Ultimately, at the suggestion of the Premier, Mr. Giroux agreed to bring the whole case to the attention of the ministers concerned.

During the week, construction and operation of government-owned commercial plants for the extraction and development of both Fort McMurray tar sands and salt deposits was strongly urged by Frank R. Falconer, liberal, Athabasca.

The provincial farm loan board came in for critical treatment at the hands of Hector Lang, liberal, Medicine Hat, and his remarks met with considerable applause at the hands of the government back benchers.

He declared that the board operated only in certain parts of the province and often did not trouble to make an inspection when a loan was requested.

Premier Brownlee replied that the government had done all in its power to prevent discrimination. He explained that the provincial government had no control over the board. It was a separate corporate body controlled by Ottawa although a provincial board operated in Alberta.

Mr. Webster stated that it appeared that the farmers were neither getting loans nor had the province any say in the matter. He failed to see why the public should contribute $25,000 toward its operation.

When appropriation totalling $98,639 for operating schools at Olds and Vermilion were under discussion W. R. Howson, urged the utilization of one of the agriculture schools closed in the interest of economy, as a provincial home for delinquent boys.

The whole discussion which was one of the most lengthy of the week was brought about by Mr. Giroux moving that the whole vote be struck out.

The debate waxed back and forth across the house. The liberals declaring that the decline in pupils showed that at least one of these schools should be closed. On the other hand, the premier, Hon. Mr. Hoadley, and a number of U.F.A. speakers, spoke strongly in favor of their retention. Mr. Giroux's motion was overwhelmingly defeated.

Later Mr. Howson moved that an item of $24,500 for board at the schools, be reduced to $7,500. This was also voted down.

F. R. Falconer put in a plea for the services of a district agriculturist for Athabasca when the vote for this service was under discussion. He was given support by Donald Cameron, U.F.A., Innisfail, and also by another government back benchers, A. L. Sanders, U.F.A., Stettler.

W. R. Howson came to grips with Hon. George Hoadley when the estimates for the vital statistics branch were being dealt with. Mr. Howson wanted to know why the death rate in Alberta had increased whereas in other provinces it had declined.

"Maybe the gentlemen who sit opposite can give some reason," said Mr. Hoadley. "I'm sure I'm not responsible for it."

"I can quite understand why, when he doesn't treat matters of this kind seriously," retorted Mr. Howson "we do not get the results we have a right to expect."

Appointment of C. A. Lyndon of the department of agriculture as district agriculturist for Calgary may be made by the government. This information was brought out when Mr. Webster moved that an item of $3,000 for a research workers be struck out. J. J. Bowlen supported his leader stating in these hard times it was not right to create new jobs.

Hugh J. Montgomery liberal, Wetaskiwin, urged the need of preserving fishing rights in Pigeon Lake for residents within a 10 mile radius of the lake. He said that last season the department had set a limit of $175,000 pounds of fish to be taken from the lake. But through fishermen coming down from other lakes no less than 230,000 pounds had been taken out of the lake in five days.

Hon. R. G. Reid replied that the whole question of giving further protection for Alberta fishermen was being reviewed.

Another long debate occurred when the appropriation of $75,000 for loans to normal school students was being considered.

Here again W. R. Howson led the attack. He proposed that the vote be struck out entirely, in view of the fact that there were from 1,000 to 1,200 Alberta teachers out of employment.

Mr. Howson pointed out that there was a large amount outstanding as loans to normal students. He declared there should be no further borrowings on capital account.

A. L. Sanders, U.F.A., Ho, Perren Baker, Premier Brownlee, Hon. Irene Pearley, Chris Pattinson, labor, A. Smeaton, labor, G. E. Cruickshank, independent, all defended the loans.

Replying to further liberal questions the minister admitted that $16,000 of loans made had been reported as "bad."

Dr. H. W. McGill, conservative, Calgary moved that the vote be cut in half. Mr. Webster declared he would support that motion. However, the vote was approved.

On Tuesday, Hon. R. G. Reid, minister of lands and mines tangled twice with members of the opposition. First with Hugh J. Farthing, conservative, Calgary, over the returned soldier question. The Calgary member contended that the government had considerably modified its policy of showing preference to the returned men. This imputation was hotly denied by the minister.

Then J. M. Dechene, liberal, St. Paul, set the fur and feathers flying once more. He had given an assurance that while acting as sub-agent in the land office at Bonnyville he had taken no part in politics.

"I am glad to have the assurance of the honorable member that during that time he took no part in politics because that seems foreign to his nature," said Mr. Reid.

Then Mr. Dechene rose with battle in his eye. He poured forth a voluble stream of words as to how he was not going to put up with that kind of treatment from the minister. "I won't stand it," he shouted. "I won't stand up here and put up with it."

"If the honorable member had listened more carefully," said the minister, "he would have heard that I said I was glad to have his assurance and would have understood that I accepted his statement."

The matter arose when Mr. Dechene charged that the present sub-agent had been engaged in political activities on behalf of the conservative candidate in the Athabasca by-election.

So it has gone on all the week. Scarcely any vote of any size has escaped the eagle eyes of the liberal opposition.

Challenge after challenge has been hurled across the floor. In this they have been led by their leader, the "wily old serpent" who shows a keen analytical mind when it comes to matters of finance.

On the other hand, the conservatives this week have, for the most part, been content to look on as watchers of the game. Once or twice Hugh C. Farthing has let fly in characteristic and forceful fashion and is now looked upon as the strongest debator in his party.

On Thursday afternoon Chris Pattinson, labor, Edson, succeeded in winning the unanimous support of the house with his resolution asking the government to use its powers with the federal administration to bring about a conference for the stabilization of the Alberta coal industry.

THE HOME GARDEN CANADIAN GARDEN SERVICE FOR 1932

FIRST VEGETABLES

In some parts of Canada, the first planting of vegetables will be going in shortly. There is a real advantage in getting certain things started as early as possible but real danger with others which do not thrive until the weather really warms up. As a rule those vegetables which are grown from their leaves, such as lettuce and spinach, are the first planted. With them, we also include radish and onion sets. Sharpfrosts will hurt these, and all of them prefer cool conditions for growth. Of course it is not advisable with these, or any vegetable, to plant all of the seed at one time, because if this is done, naturally all will be ready at one time and there will be a feast followed by a famine. With the first planting, garden peas should also go in only a recent year, are we planning to realize that it is from earliest peas that we get our best crops. About ten days following the first sowing, we should re-plant another section of the garden with the early things and also the first of the later sown vegetables, like carrots, beets and such things. In the third group we have beans, potatoes, corn and others which are not planted until danger is almost over from frost.

Planting Shrubbery and other Nursery Stock

Neglect on the part of the purchaser in the handling of rose bushes, fruit trees, perennial flowers and other nursery stocks after it is received is undoubtedly the cause of most of the failures, according to H. B. Tukey, Horticulturist at the Geneva Experiment Station all nursery stocks should be unpacked immediately, after arrival and handled in such a way as to prevent any drying out. If the ground is ready to receive them get planted as soon as possible, but if otherwise, open the box to prevent any overheating spread out in a shallow trench in some sheltered spot and cover the roots well with moist earth. If, because of delay in transit, the stock is shrivelled, it may be restored to freshness by soaking roots stems and all, for several hours in water previous to planting or 'heeling in' the shallow trench. The plants may be left in the trench for weeks until the ground is ready to receive them. In actual planting, Mr. Tukey warns against exposure of the roots to the air, as sun and wind in a few minutes may do very considerable injury. Allow plenty of room for the roots which should be spread out well, and cover firmly with fine soil. To insure no air pockets about the roots during this planting operation it is a good thing to pour half a pail or so of water around the rose bush, fruit tree, or other thing that is being planted.

Soil

There is very grave danger in working soil too soon. With heavy clay, especially, the earth is quite liable to pack together and, later on, bake. If one can walk across the garden with out getting the shoes muddy, or if the soil crumbles when squeezed tightly in the hand, it is safe to commence actual operations. The best garden soil is a fairly light loam, sloping towards the south or east. Of course we cannot all have this ideal type and location, but much can be done in improving really unfavorable conditions. Very light sandy soil can be built up to a stage where it will retain moisture, provide fertility and remain cool if plenty of straw manure vegetable refuse and similar material is dug year after year. That portion of the garden which is used for the earlier vegetables and lies idle from August on, should be planted with fall rye or perhaps oats or clover, just as soon as the last vegetables come off and this crop of green manure plowed or dug under. Treatment of this kind will add humus, and strange to say, we follow almost the same procedure in handling heavy clays. Plenty of decayed vegetable matter, or humus, will loosen up the sticky soils. Of course it may also be necessary to provide some sort of drainage either by underground tile or open ditches. Digging in a light layer of coal ashes will also help in opening up clay, and allow earlier cultivation.

5,000 FACTS ABOUT CANADA

The new edition of "5,000 Facts About Canada," for 1932 will be welcomed by the public, as it contains a wealth of new data, including the latest census returns of cities and towns over 10,000 population. The compiler, Frank Ye'gh, the well-known Canadian author and publisher, meets a long felt want in this annual compendium of Canadian facts, truly "the Dominion in a Nutshell," that has a world-wide circulation. Fifty chapters deal with every phase of our national life in the most concrete form, giving a vivid impression of the progress or otherwise of the country. There is much to hearten the reader in its contents, in the striking contrasts made with previous years and chiefly when measured by 1900, showing a marked degree of progress in spite of seasonal fluctuations. The Facts in fact act as a wholesome tonic. Copies may be had at 35 cents each or three for a dollar from the Canadian Facts Pub. Co., 588 Huron St., Toronto, or direct through newsdealers.

THE HANNA HERALD RESUMES

This week sees a resumption of publication of the Hanna Herald, which business suffered a disastrous fire on February 20th last. The issue before us is indeed a monument to the pluck and initiative of Brother H. McCrea, the owner, who carries the best wishes of the whole newspaper fraternity for a long and prosperous continuity of his editorial efforts in that district. Well done, Herb!

FARMER'S ACCOUNT BOOK

Farming is a business, and if it doesn't pay, the farmer wants to know why it doesn't pay. Some record of receipts and expenses together with an inventory (a list with values of live stock, feed, implements, etc., on hand), taken at the beginning of the farmer's year, must be kept if he is to find out why or where it doesn't pay. A record of each department of the farm business should be kept. This is the only way to find out how much is being made from each or which departments are not paying. To assist the farmer in this matter the Dominion Experimental Farms have issued a very simple and useful little account book. This little book, while simple, is a great step in advance of keeping no accounts whatever. It may be procured from the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, for the sum of ten cents.

CANADIAN BREVITIES

MONTREAL, Canada—Looking to an increase of freight to and from the Antipodes the Canadian National Steamships are contemplating separate services via the Panama Canal to Australia and New Zealand. At present the routes are combined.

OTTAWA, Canada—In the year 1931 there were 317 persons killed and 2,680 injured on Canadian railroads. Of the killed, nine were passengers and 51 were employees, the remainder being trespassers, persons involved in level crossing accidents, etc. In 1930 the totals were 425 killed and 2,512 injured.

OTTAWA, Canada—Owners of radio receiving sets in Canada now are paying an annual license fee of $2 (eight shillings) to the Federal Government. The tax recently was doubled, having stood at a dollar from the establishment of broadcasting.

What Shall We Name the Baby?

A SYMPOSIUM BY INTERESTING PEOPLE OF TODAY

CONDUCTED BY WILLIAM A. LEWIN

To select a suitable name for each baby that comes into the world is, indeed, an absorbing problem. Nearly 2,000,000 new babies were born last year. And yet there are less than 1,000 names to choose from. Parents search telephone directories for suggestions. Shall we create some interesting new names?

I suppose my favorite name is David and you may do the supposing as to why that would be so. I have no reasonable explanation to offer.

Of more rare names I think Eric would be my favorite, possibly from the mere sound.

HOW MUCH?

How much you should eat of what you do eat is a subject of real importance to you. No one can set down for you the exact amounts of the different foods you should eat.

The amount of food required varies according to age, sex, season and activity. During the years of growth food is required for body building, which is not needed once growth is completed. Men require a little more food than women. Activity uses up energy, and as body energy comes from our food, the active person requires more food than does the individual who is inactive. The heat of the body is maintained at an even level, and in cold weather, more food is used to keep the body warm than is necessary during the summer season.

How then is any one person to know how much to eat? The simplest and most practical method is to watch your weight. You can find out the average weight for your age, sex and height. Weighing yourself occasionally will show whether you are gaining or losing weight, or whether an even weight is being maintained.

If you are overweight, you have eaten too much in the past. If you are overweight and gaining, you are eating too much in the present. The reverse is true as regards underweight and continuing loss in weight.

It may be that underweight is not due to an insufficiency of food alone;

it may be that the right kinds of food are not being used. Nutrition is not, by all means, entirely a matter of food. Loss of weight may be due to actual disease, or to lack of rest, or fresh air, or some other essential to healthy living, the absence of which interferes with the proper digestion and use of the foods eaten.

The person who is free from disease and who is using the wide variety of foods, which he should take, can judge as to the quantity needed by watching his weight. We are not suggesting that you should live with your eye on a weight scale, but we are of the opinion that an occasional weighing once a month, is a good way to keep a check on the quantity of food eaten.

It is much easier to avoid overweight than it is to correct it. It is much more simple to cut down sufficiently on the diet to avoid adding weight than it is to cut off enough to reduce weight. Weight can be reduced but the process requires considerable determination, perseverance and sacrifice.

Many people are tempted to eat more food than they need. It requires self-restraint to pass by certain luscious dishes. However, failure to control the appetite is punished by digestive upsets and by overweight which is a burden and a handicap.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 181 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

QUICKLY PREPARED DESSERTS

By Betty Barclay

When you hear that unexpected guests are coming for dinner there is no need to worry about the dessert, at least. Here are two recipes that are ideal for such emergencies:

Coconut Apricot Fluff
2 cups cooked apricots
½ cup powdered sugar
½ cup cream, whipped
½ can coconut, southern style
Force apricots through sieve. Add sugar; fold in cream and ½ can coconut. Chill and sprinkle with ½ can coconut. Serves six.

Coconut Banana Snow
3 bananas, cut in small pieces
½ cup powdered sugar
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 egg white, stiffly beaten
½ cup cream, whipped
½ can coconut, southern style
Combine bananas, sugar, and lemon juice. Chill. Force through sieve. Fold pulp into egg white; then fold in cream and coconut. Serves six.

COFFEE FOR COOKIES
½ cup butter
1½ cups coffee
2 eggs
1 cup sugar
3 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
Cream butter. Add sugar, eggs well beaten, and cold coffee. Then add flour work smooth. Roll thin and bake in moderate oven. Grease pan with butter and lard mixed.

Coffee Ginger Cookies
1 cup strong, hot coffee
1 cup molasses
1 cup brown sugar
1 cup shortening
1 tablespoon boiling water
1 tablespoon ginger
1 tablespoon cinnamon
Flour for mixing
1 teaspoon soda

Dissolve soda in boiling water and stir into molasses. Pour over the shortening. Add boiling coffee and sugar, and then add seasonings. Add flour until dough is stiff enough to roll. Roll and cut into desired shapes. USE ORANGE AND LEMON PEEL.

You throw away many a delicious morsel when you cast your oranges and lemon rinds aside. Grated rinds are used by the best cooks to flavor cakes, pies, breads, desserts, frostings, fillings, sauces and other foods.

In grating, only the yellow portion of the rind should be removed. This portion contains the oils that give the flavor. Grated peels may be used fresh or mixed with sugar and kept in a tightly-covered jar. Where the whole peel is used it is ground fine, mixed with sugar, and used in the same manner as the grated rind.

CITRUS FRUIT CUP (Serves 4)
3 oranges
1 grapefruit
2 tablespoons powdered sugar
Mint sprigs
Segment oranges and grapefruit, and mix with sugar, serve very cold in cocktail glasses, garnished with mint.

ONE MINUTE "LEMON-NAISE"
(Makes 1½ cups)
Put in pint jar
½ cup lemon juice ½ cup sweetened condensed (not evaporated) milk

½ cup salad oil
1 egg yolk (unbeaten)
1 teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon salt
Fasten top on jar tightly and shake vigorously for a minute.
COLD WEATHER CALLS FOR SWEETS

This is the season when your "sweet tooth" should be catered to. The human body needs fuel to keep it warm and sweets are the quickest energy food known.

So bring out the jams, the jellies, the marmalades and the preserves. Do not refuse the romping kiddies when they ask for that old standby, sugar-bread—a mid-afternoon bite that was one of the high lights of the gay nineties. Eat sweet fruits. Use more candy than you did in the summer time.

And don't forget that sugar may be used in soups, salads, vegetable dishes—yes, even in meat dishes, where a touch helps to accent the flavor of the dish without making it sweet.

Pimiento Cabbage Salad.
Add one-fourth cup vinegar to one tablespoon flour, one-half teaspoon dry mustard, one-half teaspoon salt and one tablespoon sugar. Place in a small saucepan over the fire for a few moments, without letting it come to a boil. Then slowly add one cup diluted, evaporated milk, stirring constantly until the mixture thickens. Boil for one minute and remove from fire. Add two tablespoons salad oil, a dash of onion vice, and one can of pimiento chopped fine. Mix thoroughly and serve with shaved cabbage.

ROMANCE OF VINCENZA

had ever called on him or asked for him at the Children's Court.

The day previous having been a holiday, the time of death fixed by the medical examiner showed that the murder must have been committed on the night of July 3rd and the body had lain where it was found all through the following day and night when the court was closed. It had been purely a personal affair, detectives reasoned, committed by somebody who had a personal reason for getting Calvacco out of the way of who had killed him in a fit of rage as robbery could not possibly have been the motive for the crime. Furthermore, it had been committed by some person whom Calvacco had voluntarily admitted to the building during the night hours when he was the sole occupant—and there somebody who knew the man had been his murderer.

But in spite of all their inquiries, the detectives could find nobody whom the man knew except some few court attendants who were quickly eliminated from all suspicion. Then suddenly one of the detectives found a clue; it was the faint crimson imprint of the rubber heel of a woman's shoe, so faint that it was barely discernible and had escaped the notice of the detectives in their preliminary investigation. There it was, faintly outlined in red on the white tile floor near where the body had been found had dried to a point where it was impossible for the imprint to have been made after the discovery of the crime. This heel imprint pointed diagonally to the right in the direction the wounded man had taken in his staggering attempts to escape the death thrusts. Then another small heel print was found, very faint on the tile floor, pointing back in the direction of the room in which the attack on the man had evidently occurred.

From those faint heel prints the detectives built up a hypothetical reconstruction of the crime. Evidently at some time during the night of July 3rd, Calvacco had admitted a woman to the building. This woman had gone with him to Room 310, where, for some reason she had attacked him with the long-bladed bread knife which the detectives had found behind the couch. After having fought with her in the room, as evidenced by the overturned furniture, the man, mortally wounded, had staggered out into the hall and along the hallway to the detention room, which he entered. The woman had followed him, perhaps struck again, and when he had fallen on the floor of the detention room and she had made sure he was dead she had returned again to Room 310 to get something she had left there. Then, probably frightened at the realization of her act, she had thrown the crimson-stained knife behind the couch, the blade striking the wall where it had made a nick in the plaster.

Who was this woman? Nobody knew of Vincenzo Calvacco having had any woman acquaintances, and nobody had ever seen him talking with a woman. Could the night watchman have been accosted by some chance woman of the streets during one of his visits outside the building and have taken her into the building and to the room where the murder had occurred? This thought was quickly abandoned, however, as such woman do not go around armed with a bread knife. It was somebody who Calvacco had known long enough for her to have had a reason for killing him.

Then suddenly something stirred in the memory of Mrs. Murphy, a probation officer of the Children's Court. She recalled that three or four months before a young woman had come to the court and asked for Vincenzo Calvacco who wasn't there at the time. She also thought that this was the same woman who had conversed with her on a previous occasion about placing a little boy on probation, and if so she would have her name on the records. After searching the records she gave a name and address to the detectives.

At the address, they found that they were in luck. They found the young woman wasn't at home but that she worked with a cigar manufacturer somewhere near 86th Street and second avenue. After a considerable search among the cigar manufacturers in that neighborhood the detectives finally succeeded in locating the young woman in question. She took their approach coolly and calmly, appeared to be unresponsive that she was to be charged with a crime, and accompanied the detectives willingly to the 21st precinct police station where they told her they wanted to question her about something that concerned a man of her acquaintance.

At the station house there were so many police officers and detectives ready to fire questions at the young woman that it was decided to take her to police headquarters where there would be less confusion. Detective Henry Oswald of the Homicide Bureau accompanied her on the ride downtown in the police car.

As the car started Oswald made only one statement to the girl. All he said was "This is terrible." Not another word was said until the car had reached Houston street and the Bowers when Oswald suddenly and without warning turned to the girl again.

"How did you go in that night, through the big gate?" he shot at her.

"Yes," she answered, "Was Calvacco waiting for you?"

"Yes," she replied again. Evidently, the girl's mind was reviewing the scene; moreover, as these questions came at her suddenly after a long silence in which her mind had opportunity to pursue its own thoughts without interruption, the girl had answered without thinking of what she was doing.

At police headquarters the girl's shoes were removed and bloodstains were found on the heel of the left shoe and on the side of the right shoe. Spots of blood were found on her hand bag, coat and on a signet ring that she wore. Then she was told that she was charged with the murder of Vincenzo Calvacco and when confronted with the evidence of the stains and the answers she had given to Detective Oswald in which she had admitted going to the Children's Court and being admitted by Calvacco she broke down and told her story.

"Nearly four years we have lived together," she said. "I had always been a good girl till I met Vincenzo and I loved him. He loved me too, and the warmth of his love broke down all my resistance. I trusted him. It seemed I couldn't refuse any request he made of me. He promised to marry me. But the time came when he began to get angry at me when I would talk to him about marriage. Sometimes he would strike me—but I loved him anyway. Once he told me that he wasn't ever going to marry me—that he couldn't marry me. When I asked him if there was another woman, he answered, 'Try and find out.' That was three or four months ago.

"Vincenzo always spends his week ends out of town; he said he had another job over in New Jersey at the motorists who wish to see the laws which he worked on week-ends and at first he gave the excuse that this would enable him to save up enough so we could get married sooner. I believed him. But when he began to grow cold to me I suspected that he might be seeing another woman on these week-ends, so after he told me to try and find out, I decided that I would. I followed him; and I saw him in the arms of that other woman. I found that he had a wife and family of children living in Lodi, New Jersey; that he had been married all the time that he had been making love to me and that I was only his romance during the week when he was away from home. He had never intended to marry me as he had truly said when he had grown tired of me.

"I was innocent of any wrong-doing with him, for I loved him and considered that we were as good as man and wife. I faced him with what I had learned and he only pushed me away and went out of the house; telling me to 'forget it.' I brooded over this, and that night I took the bread knife and wrapped it in a paper bag and went to the building where he works. I had often met him there. He let me in. We went upstairs to a room, and here again I pleaded with him to leave that other woman and marry me. He refused and roughly pushed me over on a couch.

"Then I went mad with rage and seized the knife, striking out at him blindly. It struck him and he then groaned. Still blind with rage at the shame he had brought upon me, I struck him again. Then we fought all over the room, and he was bleeding in all the time. He took the knife from me and threw it against the wall, then he staggered out of the room. I began to realize what I had done then, and I followed him. He went into another room where he fell on the floor. I pleaded with him to speak to me, but he was unconscious. Then I went back into the room where we were in first to get my handbag I had left on a chair and went home."

Thus Louise Arnold told her pitiful story—the story of a woman betrayed, of a cold heart that had been melted by the heat of an intense passion long subdued only to find that it was being used as a plaything for the vile passion of a man—the story of a love outraged.

On August 15, 1923, Louise Arnold was placed on trial for the murder of Vincenzo Calvacco in the court of general sessions. She entered a plea of guilty to manslaughter in the second degree, and because of the extenuating circumstances connected with her act—perhaps because of the pity that always exists in any human breast for a woman betrayed—this plea was accepted. She was sentenced to serve from six to twelve years in State's prison by Judge Mancuso.
